

WILSON TO FIGHT ON FOR REFORM

Governor Warns Jersey Enemies That They Cannot Come Back.

USED TO OWN STATE

Their Return to Power Would Ruin the Party, He Says.

INVITED BY TY COBB

Tells Georgia Delegation Why He Cannot Promise to Visit Augusta.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—President-elect Wilson set at rest to-day all doubts as to his future residence in New Jersey and the part he intends to play in the politics of this State after March 4 by issuing a statement in which he said he will use every proper influence to command to assist the progressive forces that have stood at his back during the last two years. He said:

"I have been surprised by numerous inquiries as to whether I would continue to take interest in the political affairs of the State after assuming my duties as President, and yet I realize the significance of these inquiries. Last summer I warned the friends of the State very explicitly that the men who formerly controlled and directed our politics were awaiting their opportunity to recover their control and were expecting to find it. What I then said has been abundantly verified by what has happened in the interval. The progressive forces of the State have been so completely crushed that they have no chance of coming back into power.

"There will be severely disappointed. They cannot again impose upon the voters of New Jersey if they should in some evil moment recover control of the party machinery they will only ruin the party and impermanently out of power. Every step they take to establish their power should be at once exposed and stopped. The people of the State need not fear that I will become indifferent so long as their confidence encourages me to believe that they wish my aid and counsel. I shall in the future use every proper and legitimate power I have and every influence at my disposal to support and assist the new forces which have regenerated our life during the last two years. I shall not go back in this business, for I understand my duty to be to stand back of the progressive forces in the Democratic party everywhere and at every juncture and I feel that in these matters I am under particular obligations of conscience and gratitude to the people of New Jersey.

"The Governor was urged to make this declaration of his purpose because of what appears to him to be a definite movement to set at naught the reforms already accomplished and to discredit the men who have enlisted under his banner as progressive Democrats. The first intimation of such a movement came with the selection of Assemblyman Leon R. Taylor as the caucus choice of the Democrats for Speaker of the next Assembly. While the Governor avers that the selection of Mr. Taylor is not a victory for those opposed to him it is known that he would rather have seen the support of the Democratic majority go to Assemblyman Charles O'Connor Hennessey, an ardent progressive. The Governor learned of the selection of Mr. Taylor in Bermuda and then expressed himself as satisfied. When his opinion was asked to-day he remarked that Mr. Taylor always had been ready to do the right thing.

"For the present, however, the contest appears to hang on the election of State Treasurer, who is chosen by the Legislature. The chief candidates are Edward E. Grosscup, State Democratic chairman, and Edward I. Edwards, a Jersey City banker, who is now State Comptroller. When the Governor was asked if he would take any part in this particular matter he replied:

"Oh, yes; I'll be in it up to my neck. Whether I am visible or not."

"Would you be willing to bet," asked some one, "that Mr. Grosscup will be elected?"

"I am not that kind of a sportsman," he replied. "I don't bet. I go to work."

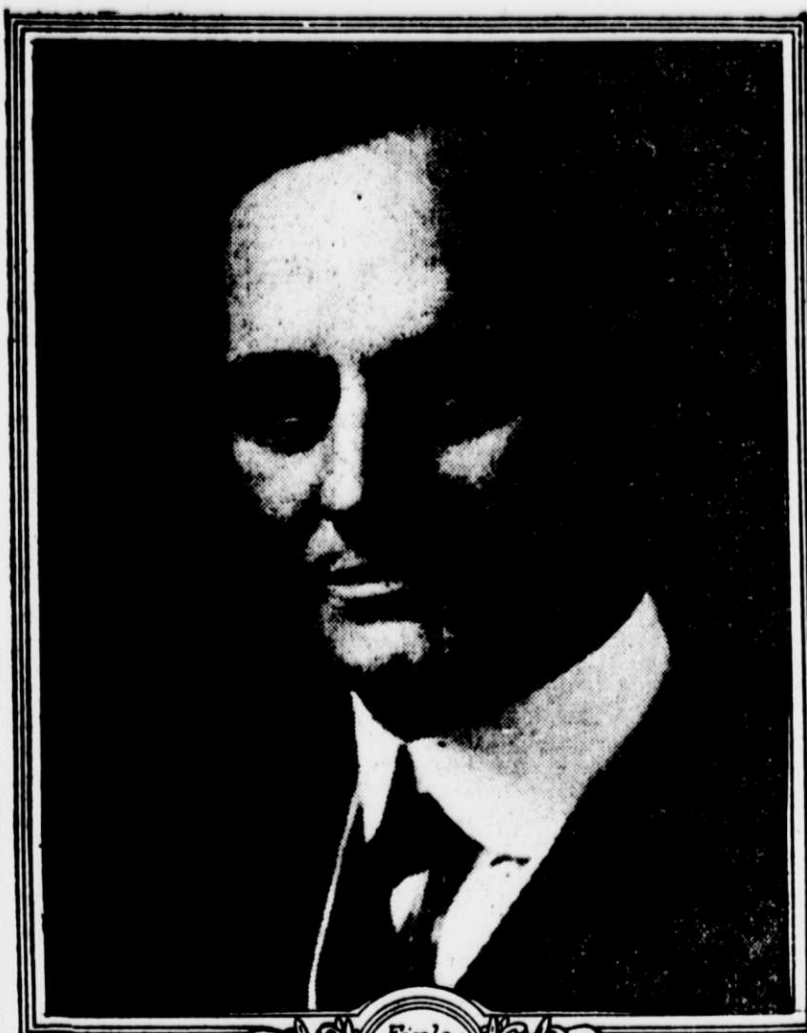

In answer to other questions he said he intended to remain Governor with all the powers that are in him, that he would put up to the Legislature a great deal of very important work and that his resignation as Governor would depend largely on the length of time it will take to accomplish what he has set out to do. Then it was suggested that there was much concern in the State as to whether or not he would continue to regard New Jersey as his home after his inauguration as President and that there were some persons who hoped that he would not. About ten minutes later he issued his statement.

"Later in the day the Governor again made reference to the situation in New Jersey and his attitude toward it. A delegation of Georgians came to tell him how glad Augusta would be to have him spend his vacations there. In the delegation was Ty Cobb, the baseball player. D. G. Fogarty, representing the Board of Trade, was the spokesman. He called to the Governor's attention the fact that he had lived in Augusta from the time he was 2 years old until he was 14 and that many of his former schoolmates and members of the first Presbyterian Church, of which the Governor's father used to preach, would be mighty glad to welcome him. To this the Governor answered:

"Your invitation is not the only delightful suggestion, but one that touches me deeply. I look back with genuine pleasure to my childhood days in Augusta, but I want to say the difficulty of accepting this or any other invitation of the kind."

"There is a very interesting political situation in New Jersey and back of that there are plenty of persons who used to own the State whose title is now being questioned, but who would be glad to take possession again if they got the chance. These persons have an ardent desire to get rid of me. I suppose some of them voted for me at the last election because of that. The Governor of the State is elected for four years and cannot succeed himself, and they figured it would be better to get rid of me at the end of two years by electing me to the Presidency. It is important that these men should feel I am still connected with the State of New Jersey. The Democratic party has now reached the point where it must decide whether or

Miss Helen Gould's Fiance

Finley J. Shepard

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 17.—Blind and bedridden for five years, Mrs. Peter L. Shepard, mother of Finley J. Shepard, who is to marry Miss Helen Gould, has just learned of her son's engagement. She is an inmate of the New Haven General Hospital, where she has been a patient since 1907.

The announcement came to Mrs. Shepard in a telegram from her son at the same time that the engagement was announced by George Gould in New York, but through some delay she did not receive it until yesterday.

Mrs. Shepard fell at her home in Clinton five years ago and injured her hip so that she became a permanent invalid. She is now 83 years old.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 17.—That Finley J. Shepard, the fiancé of Helen Gould, soon is to become head of one of the Gould roads is the report current here to-day and confirmed in part by Mrs. D. W. Cutter, sister of Mr. Shepard. The story is that the Goulds will give him a promotion which will make it possible for him to reside in the East.

Mrs. Cutter said: "We have known for some time of the hope of my brother to give such a remarkable woman as Miss Gould. It appears to be common gossip in high railroad circles that he is to go East to an important position soon."

not it is to be progressive, and having started I cannot separate myself from the fight. My conscience forbids me to. For that reason I see no vacation ahead of me for some time, and having a mixture of Scotch and Irish in me I don't feel as if I wanted one when there is a fight on. After a few more elections perhaps these persons will realize that the progressive platform is complete to the last dot over the 'i'. I can't break away from New Jersey, but I shall entertain the hope that I may visit you from time to time.

The Governor's attention was called to the report that Andrew Carnegie had informed Thomas Nelson Page of his selection as Ambassador to Great Britain. The Governor said the reported list of those who will direct the affairs of the incoming administration was now so large that the addition of one more name would make no particular difference.

Late in the afternoon the Governor decided that the press of business was so great he would be unable to attend the banquet of the Southern Society and sent a telegram of regret. He changed his mind, however, when William G. McAdoo got on the phone and pleaded with him to come. The Governor went into conference with State Chairman Grosscup and other Democratic leaders regarding the political situation as it has developed during his absence.

DIPLOMATIC PROMOTIONS.

Montgomery Schuyler, Jr., Made Minister to Ecuador.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The appointment of Montgomery Schuyler, Jr., of New York to be Minister to Ecuador was announced at the State Department to-day, and the nomination was sent to the Senate. Mr. Schuyler is a graduate of Columbia University, was a university scholar for two years and a university fellow for two years. His first appointment in the diplomatic service was as second secretary of the embassy at St. Petersburg in 1902, and he has since served at Bangkok and Tokio, and is now its first secretary of the embassy at Mexico City.

Mr. Schuyler's appointment is in accordance with the policy of Secretary Knox to build up a merit system of promotions in the diplomatic service. A large number of promotions in the lower grades of that service and in the consular service were also announced to-day including the following:

Nelson O. Shughnessy, New York, secretary of embassy, Mexico City; Thomas W. Wickler, New York, secretary at Panama; Ralph B. RELATIVE OF WILSON

BECOMES AN ACTRESS

"Miss Howe" on Road With Nazimova Wife of President-elect's Nephew.

HAD FAMILY APPROVAL

Without Letters or Influence She Got Part From Charles Frohman.

Under the name of Margaret Howe, a niece by marriage of President-elect Woodrow Wilson has been on the stage for the past three months. She is the wife of George Howe, who holds the chair of Latin in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She came to this city and secured a part in a production without using influence or letters of introduction. Miss Howe went on the road with Mme. Nazimova as Madame Miroslav in "The Marquisette" and played one night stands until Nazimova appeared in "Bella Donna" at the Empire Theatre, where there was no part for her.

Mrs. Howe is the daughter of the late William J. Flinn, who held the chair of Latin, and was a member of the faculty in the University of South Carolina at Columbia. Her husband is a favorite nephew of Woodrow Wilson, being the son of his only sister, Mrs. A. W. Howe of Raleigh, N. C., who was Anne Wilson.

Mr. Howe was brought up in Princeton where he studied and after his studies were completed was sent to Halle, where he obtained his Ph. D. Mrs. Howe's mother was formerly Janney Smyth of Charleston. She purchased the Howe homestead in Columbia in which she now lives and in which the President-elect spent many of his boyhood days.

"Last July," said Mrs. Howe last night in her apartments at 29 Gramercy Park, "my husband secured a year's leave of absence and went to Europe to further his studies. He is now in Rome. I had always taken an active part in private theatricals in Columbia and was anxious to go on the professional stage.

"My husband believed that the stage offered an honorable profession and that it was my duty; if I felt that I could make a success of it, to make a try at it. Uncle Woodrow made no objection; in fact, he wished me every success.

"I have had a short season of one night stands, and they, if anything, could, would have discouraged me. I will try for two or three years at least to make a success. I have kept my family relations to myself, as I wanted to succeed on my own merits.

"No one in Mme. Nazimova's company or in Mr. Frohman's office knew that I was related to the President-elect. I had planned to call myself Margaret Southern, after my home land, but gave my name instead as Margaret Howe. And it got on the programme as 'Miss.' So I will keep that name."

Mrs. Howe, who is a young woman, and who has been married but a few years, has no children. She has furnished her apartment in Southern style, has a fireplace and uses candles in preference to modern lights. And she serves tea to interviewers.

"I am considering several offers," she said yesterday. "That tour of one night stands was a wonderful experience. Now I am studying the voice with Dr. Franklin Lawson at the Aeolian Hall, not with the idea of singing, but to perfect a speaking voice."

BRYAN DOESN'T WANT THE STATE PORTFOLIO

Friends Say Attorney-General-ship, or Treasury, Is the Westerner's Choice.

TOTAL TALK WITH WILSON HERE

Democrats Say He'll Break the Cabinet if He's In, and the Tariff if He's Out.

President-elect Woodrow Wilson and Col. William J. Bryan are to confer on Friday or Saturday on many subjects which may affect the coming administration at Washington.

Col. Bryan is coming to town to attend the dinner to be given by many notable Democrats to Governor-elect William Sulzer at the Hotel Astor on Saturday evening. The President-elect and Col. Bryan are to speak at the dinner and Senator James A. O'Gorman is to preside. The Governor-elect is also to speak. Either before the dinner or immediately after it Wilson and Bryan, it was announced yesterday, are to get together and discuss policies and patronage.

Col. Bryan's intimates in this city said yesterday that the Nebraska much prefers to be either Attorney-General or Secretary of the Treasury in Wilson's Cabinet, and has little liking for the State portfolio. New York Democrats could not recall, several of them remarked, that Col. Bryan had sufficient experience in the law to warrant the aspiration to become Attorney-General of the United States. They could remember only one case in sixteen years in which Col. Bryan practiced his profession—the Widow Bennett case.

According to the record Col. Bryan drew the will for a Connecticut advertisement in which Bennett bequeathed $50,000 to Bryan and left a sealed letter to his widow requesting that this request to Bryan be carried out. Instead the widow took the case into the Connecticut courts and Bryan was defeated.

In fact, these Democrats went on to say, Col. Bryan has not practiced his profession for a long time. As a Congressman in 1894 he had an opportunity, and since his first nomination for the Presidency, in 1896, he has made politics his profession. Therefore Col. Bryan's Democratic critics argued that he was not adequately equipped for the post of the highest law officer of the Government, whose duties call for vast and intricate experience in the great legal problems affecting the corporate interests of the country.

There was objection to Col. Bryan for the Secretaryship of the Treasury on the same sort of grounds. He has had no practical experience, it was pointed out, either in business or finance which would permit him to handle that most difficult and vastly important portfolio.

No particular objections were raised to Bryan for the State portfolio. "The idea apparently is prevalent among Democrats who have watched Col. Bryan's career for sixteen years that any Cabinet of which Bryan is a member cannot hold together more than six months anyway. But the tariff bill will have been passed and signed certainly within four or at the most five months after March 4. And a break in the Cabinet then, it was suggested, would do no harm to the first great economic measure of the Administration.

MAN "IN TROUBLE" TAKES ACID.

Youth Answering Description Came From Shop Where Man Was Shot.

Harry Goldberg, 23 years old, a packer, who said that he lived at 463 Fourth avenue, Brooklyn, swallowed the contents of a small phial at Wall and Nassau streets late yesterday afternoon and was taken to the Hudson street hospital in a serious condition.

When asked if he had tried to kill himself on account of a woman, Goldberg said: "My trouble was worse than that. But what the trouble was he refused to say."

Late last night detectives attached to the Stagg street station in Brooklyn were told that a young man answering Goldberg's description was seen on Monday afternoon coming out of a bookshop at 76 Leonard street kept by Max Flaum, who was found later in the day with a bullet in his left side and another in his cheek. Flaum died of his wounds yesterday afternoon at St. Catherine's Hospital.

The detectives say they have been told that Flaum's mysterious caller returned to the bookshop immediately after leaving it and had a dispute with the bookseller, after which he went away.

Up to an early hour this morning they had not connected Goldberg with the man who visited Flaum. Detectives Cramer and Winderberg of the 163d precinct, Brooklyn, went to the Hudson street Hospital early this morning and identified Goldberg as the man who was wanted for the murder of Flaum. The Leonard street, New York, police are watching the would be suicide.

FOUND VICTIMS IN MANY LANDS.

Obtained Goods From Manufacturers Under False Pretences.

Max Frank of 323 Reed street, Philadelphia, who was indicted on last Friday by the Grand Jury of New York county and arrested yesterday morning on the charge of obtaining clothing and woolen goods from New York manufacturers under false pretences, appears to have operated throughout the United States except that a part of the stock was in the possession of William C. Crane, attorney of the New York Credit Men's Association, who are pressing the case.

Last February Frank ordered goods amounting to $1,000 from Eliot Bigelow Sons & Co., 45 East Eleventh street, representing himself as Mr. Frank of M. Frank & Co., Philadelphia. He asked the agent of the Bigelow concern to look up his rating and they found it good. The goods were duly shipped except that a part of the stock was not ready and the bill amounted to approximately $688. Frank had stated that he always discounted his bills in ten days. The Bigelow firm has never received the money. Frank got the goods without difficulty from the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Again Frank ordered a bill of goods from H. K. Schaeffer & Co., a West Twenty-second street. Within a few days he sent back word that the goods were damaged and that he had delivered them to the spongers. Schaeffer & Co. ordered another bill of goods and ordered their mill man to inspect the goods at the spongers. The mill man found no goods there.

NINE MEN NAMED TO FIND CAUSE OF LABOR'S UNREST

Senator Sutherland of Utah Heads the New Industrial Commission.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The Commission on Industrial Relations, nominated by President Taft to-day in conformity with the act of Congress of August 23 last, is expected by the President and by Secretary Nagel, who superintended the selection of the commission, to undertake investigations that will be far reaching in importance in the industrial and commercial world. Congress has appropriated $100,000 for the commission to begin its work and has authorized it "to hold sittings and public hearings anywhere in the United States, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses and to compel testimony, and has authorized it or its employees to travel in or outside of the United States on the business of the commission. These are the President's nominations:

Senator George Sutherland of Utah; George B. Chandler, a member of the Connecticut Legislature; Charles S. Barrett of Atlanta, president of the Farmers' Union; F. A. Delano of Chicago, president of the Wabash Railroad; Adolph Lewisohn of New York city, merchant and philanthropist; F. C. Schwedman of St. Louis, vice-president of the National Manufacturers Association and electrical engineer; A. B. Garretson of Iowa, president of the Railway Conductors Association; John B. Lennon of Chicago, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor; and James O'Connell of the District of Columbia, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor.

12 GUNMEN IN STREET BATTLE.

Detective and Policeman, Coming From Behind, Catch Three.

As Detective John Weldon of Brooklyn police headquarters and Patrolman Joseph Larken were talking at Degraw street and Tiffany place, that borough, early last evening they heard shots in quick succession.

"I ran into Degraw street in a section known as the Hollow and saw Italians lined up, six on each side of the street, popping at one another with revolvers. They pounced on the marksmen from the rear and captured three. Weldon grabbed Vito Zaccaroni of 122 Degraw street, and the Italian poked the muzzle of his gun against the detective's waistband. Zaccaroni pressed the trigger. Weldon said, but the revolver missed fire and the officer used his club until the prisoner quit.

Larken arrested Frank de Lauka and Vito Simonetti.

The police failed to find that anybody had been hit in the crossfire.

The men with the guns, the police say, came from different towns in Italy. There had been a dispute over Italian wine in a Degraw street saloon just before the street demonstration concerning the achievements of soldiers from their respective towns in the Turco-Italian war.

SULZER TAKES DOWN LAW SIGN.

Governor-elect Will Give Up His Second Avenue House Too.

The sign "William Sulzer, Attorney-at-Law," was scraped yesterday off the door on the ninth floor of 115 Broadway, where Mr. Sulzer has shared for several years an office with Samuel L. Frankenstein.

The name of ex-Gov. A. E. Spriggs of Montana, who has had a desk room in the office for some time, was painted in its place.

Mr. Sulzer said that he will give up his house at 175 Second avenue also.

"Does that mean that you are going to make Albany your legal residence?" was asked.

"Oh, I don't know about that," Mr. Sulzer replied. "Can't tell at all."

Mr. Sulzer spent part of yesterday talking over the affairs of the National Guard with Major Hamilton, his newly selected Adjutant-General.

A resolution was passed last night by the Dartmouth Club asking Mr. Sulzer to appoint in place of William B. Willcox as head of the Public Service Commission John J. Hopper. Mr. Hopper is a graduate of Dartmouth and of the Thayer School of Civil Engineering. Mr. Hopper built part of the present subway.
